Forget, ~~goodwill and equality~~ when it comes to our friendships. (Research has shown that when it comes to picking friends, we feel most comfortable in the company of people who we think are on the same level as us socially or even slightly below us) It doesn't matter how well you are doing; as long as you believe you are better off than your friends and neighbours, you find your life more fulfilling.

This new research might come as a shock to many, but if we are completely honest with ourselves, we would realise that at some point or the other, we must have felt slightly threatened by a friend's success.

Even with the friendships that most of us have left behind, we often believe that the reason it happened was because you drifted apart. But the real reason could be that at some point, one of you could have felt a bit superior or inferior to the other. It could be a fantastic job or a set of great friends that could cause the insecurity. Even if we don't spell it out, chances are that most friendships have a lot going on below the surface.
